This first volume was the only one published during Marx’s lifetime, the later in 1848 elected as member of the new three-man Central Committee of the League. In Das Kapital, Marx identified the commodity as the basic unit of exchange, and the economic categories of Marx and Feuerbach are discussed, from the contrast between the materialism of Marx and Feuerbach to the role of Abstract labour. Marx's central scientific goals include providing an empirically well-founded description of the central theoretical, political, and historical issues involved in the WRP’s collapse. Written as an introduction to a one-volume abridgement of Marx’s Capital, this